

Adam Lee

Adam currently serves as the Director of Emergency Management and Organizational Resilience at Memorial Hermann Health System. In this role, he spearheads the development and execution of comprehensive emergency management and business continuity initiatives and oversees all non-technical operational facets of cybersecurity preparedness and response. Adam holds a master's degree from Sam Houston State University and an MBA from Doane University. He brings a wealth of expertise to his field and has attained credentials as a Certified Emergency Manager and Master Continuity Practitioner.

Adam's contributions also extend beyond his organizational role; he has made scholarly contributions by publishing in national and international peer-reviewed journals and has presented in numerous engagements including the International Disaster Management Conference. His dedication to enhancing emergency management and business continuity practices underscores his commitment to ensuring the safety of healthcare systems and communities.