

Janelle Rios, PhD, MPH, Faculty Associate

Director, Prevention, Preparedness, and Response (P2R) Consortium

Deputy Director, Texas Epidemic Public Health Institute (TEPHI)

Dr. Rios is a faculty associate at The University of Texas Health Science Center at Houston (UTHealth) School of Public Health (SPH). Dr. Rios is the Deputy Director of the Texas Epidemic Public Health Institute (TEPHI), an innovative state agency authorized by the Texas Legislature in 2021 to prepare the state for future health threats related to infectious diseases. She also serves as director and principal investigator of the Prevention, Preparedness, and Response (P2R) Consortium, a large multi-site, multi-component worker training program funded by the National Institute for Environmental Health Sciences.